Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Wednesday, November 16

- A strong Santa Ana wind event will peak through early afternoon today, with winds gradually diminishing through tonight. Widespread gusts of 40 to 60 MPH will continue, with local gusts exceeding 70 MPH, strongest across Los Angeles and Ventura Counties as well as near Cajon Pass in southwest San Bernardino County.
 - Red Flag Warnings continue for most of Los Angeles and Ventura Counties through 7 PM this evening. The combination of very strong winds, low humidity levels in the 8-15% range, and receptive fuels (specifically fine fuels) will contribute to the potential for rapid fire growth if any new fires develop.
 - Elevated to briefly critical fire weather conditions are also expected through this afternoon in foothill and mountain locations prone to northeast winds across Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo Counties.
 - Damage to trees and power lines is likely in some areas due to the strong winds, with some power outages possible. Driving will be difficult for some high profile vehicles.
- Another moderate to potentially strong Santa Ana wind event is possible Friday night and Saturday. Exact wind speeds MIGHT be slightly lower compared to the current, ongoing event, but fine fuels will have dried out even more by that time.
- Below normal temperatures will persist across much of the state through this weekend. Overnight low temperatures will fall into the 30s across the Central Valley and areas closer to the coasts, with teens over the higher elevations. Areas of morning frost remain possible.
